To raise money for the Children with Disabilities Christmas Party, we are raffling off another football signed by OU Sooner Heisman trophy winners. It will be encased and ready to be added to your memorabilia collection or would be a great gift for your loved ones who are big fans. Tickets are $1 each or 6 for $5. Go OOOOOOU!

FUNDRAISER QUILT DRAWING

OIL is also having a quilt raffle fundraiser. Tickets are also $1 each or 6 for $5.

We need help in distributing tickets so if you can assist with either, call and we will bring you a ticket package.

PICNIC WITH THE CANDIDATES

The last picnic of the year will be held on Thursday, October 7th, 5:30 p.m. at Chadick Park. As always, OIL will provide the hot dogs and drinks but you are asked to bring something store bought to go with them such as macaroni salad, chips, or dessert. Our potential legislators have been invited to share the issues they would like to tackle if elected. Please come and let them know your disability concerns.

DISABILITY PARKING ENFORCEMENT

Enforcement of disability parking in Oklahoma took a real boost with Governor Brad Henry's signing of House Bill 2567 into state law. Enforcement of this bill without cost to Oklahoma taxpayers is a real stroke of genius.

Where did we stand before House Bill 2567? Here's a quick look. State statute said municipalities "may enforce" disability parking rather than "shall enforce".

The Americans with Disabilities Act said that people with disabilities should have access to private property/business open to the public. However, some local police were reluctant to issue tickets on private property. Enforcement of disability parking was uneven across the state. What good is disability parking if violations are not cited? That is half a promise, and people with disabilities want what was originally intended – a parking space which honors their disability. Real enforcement restores the promise.

Here's how the new law opens the door to enforcement. It says municipalities "shall enforce," but it offers an incentive by allowing them to keep eighty percent of the $500 fine. Twenty percent of the fine would go to the Department of Public Safety to maintain a database available 24/7 containing all people with valid parking placards.

Police can easily check a current placard and if that placard belongs to either the driver or passenger in the vehicle. Modification of a disability placard is considered falsification of a state document and will be assessed an additional $500 fine.

Oklahoma is now the only state with a statute where disability parking enforcement is totally funded by the fees generated. The new law will bring uniform enforcement across the state as municipalities see that enforcement brings an advantage to them.

How did all this happen? The Oklahoma Office of Disability Concerns (ODC) received several calls on disability parking from one area, and they referred those constituents to their elected representative, Paul Wesselhoft. Representative Wesselhoft then approached ODC to research state statute and make suggestions as to how to improve the law.

ODC office asked the Department of Public Safety which issues the placards and asked local law enforcers what they needed to make disability parking work. With the help of Representative Wesselhoft's staffers, they wrote a bill which he sponsored in the Oklahoma House of Representatives.

Debbie Leftwich agreed to sponsor the bill in the Oklahoma Senate. Governor Brad Henry recently signed this bill into law. Citizens worked with their elected officials to address a problem.

People with disabilities benefit when using good advocacy techniques and staying with the issue despite all the work it takes. You can make a difference. Never accept half a promise.

WAYS TO HELP YOUR CHILD HAVE A SUCCESSFUL SCHOOL YEAR

1. Make an appointment to meet your child's teacher and have a copy of the IEP and other necessary information about your child.
2. Learn school policies and follow them.
3. Model respect for teachers and encourage your child to do the same.
4. Create an environment that is conducive to learning at home.
5. Celebrate effort, rather than grades, learning and test scores.
6. Encourage your child to pursue his or her interests. Try not to pressure your child into pursuing your interests or interests that you wish you had pursued.
7. Reinforce learning out of the classroom through extracurricular activities, family activities and one-on-one time.
8. Listen to what your child is saying and learn to be a good observer. Watch for signs that your child is developing new interests and then nurture them.
9. Model lifelong learning. Nurture your own interests and engage in learning activities that expand your interests and build skills.
10. Engage your child in conversation, but don't grill him or her. Children often are more likely to tell a parent about their day when they are engaged in another activity, such as setting the table or taking a walk after supper.
11. Try not to make homework an issue. Allow a child to take the responsibility for what he or she does – or doesn't – do.
12. Invoke Grandma's rule: Eat your veggies before dessert and finish your homework before moving on to the fun stuff.
13. Get involved in your child's school by volunteering in his/her classroom or other areas. Getting to know the school faculty and other parents provides valuable resources for helping your child.

Children may not always be excited about a new school year but with support and guidance this could be the best year ever.

NAME BRAND DRUGS OR GENERIC?

Generic drugs make sense
Sometimes people wonder if generic drugs work as well as brand name drugs. The answer is yes! The Food and Drug Administration, better known as the FDA, makes sure that generic drugs are safe and effective.

What are generic drugs?

A generic drug is the same as a brand name drug in dosage, safety, strength, quality, performance and intended use. It may be a different color or shape than the brand-name drug. Today, more than half of all prescriptions are filled with generic drugs.

Are generic drugs as safe as brand-name drugs? Do they work as well?

Yes. The FDA looks at all drugs to make sure that they are safe and that they work. Since a generic drug uses the same active ingredients and is shown to work the same way in the body, it has the same benefits and risks as the brand-name version of the same drug.

Why do generic drugs cost less?

Generic drugs cost less because generic drug makers don't have to spend as much money on research and advertising as the company that invented the drug. Also, more than one company can make the same generic drug, so they have to compete on price.

Does every brand-name drug have a generic?

No. When a new drug is approved by the FDA, it is sold only as a brand-name drug for the first several years. This allows the company that invented the drug to earn back the costs of research and advertising. Later, other drug companies can sell generic versions of the same drug, but only after they have been approved by the FDA.

Not only do generic drugs make sense, but they can save you cents, too. When your doctor is writing a prescription, it's usually a good idea to ask if there is a generic drug that would work for you. If you have questions about your current medications, talk to your doctor or pharmacist to discuss switching to generic drugs. Sooner Care has a list of generic drugs that don't require a co-pay at the pharmacy and can be found on the OHCA website at www.okhca.org/ZeroCopayGenerics.
